Dream job   Looking for an interesting and stable project with established development/management/business processes. I like to develop quality bugless functionality, that's why I'm not interested in some startups and products that are developed in a hurry.

Html5 Developer

I had been working on the website interface (including all its subsites) using Ruby on Rails development tools. Also, I developed complex UI elements, implemented UX patterns, implemented pixel-perfect layout for displaying a large amount of different data, developed versions of sites for people with special needs. Worked on small tasks on the backend. Wrote templates for emails, and was engaged in the automation of their sending. Engaged in unit testing.
